

Confidence high for Crawford

The Canadian Press

CHICAGO
If Corey Crawford is feeling the pressure of being in his first Stanley Cup final, he isn't showing it.

The Chicago Blackhawks goaltender cracked jokes about his glove hand and already seemed to be over his roughest start of these playoffs, when he was beaten five times on 33 shots by the Boston Bruins. He quipped that during the Western Conference final there was criticism of his blocker side so "both sides are bad, I guess."

And even though a weakness was exposed, Crawford's confidence isn't shaken going into Game 5 Saturday night.

"I think it's something you have to learn from," Crawford said. "If that would've happened in junior, I think I would've been pretty deflated, and my confidence would've been pretty low. I think it's something you build over time and something you learn from."

It was no secret the Bruins kept shooting glove-side Wednesday, and the 26-year-old deflected the notion that he has a weakness that could derail Chicago's championship hopes.

Crawford also acknowledged that adjustments might be necessary. Even this late in a run, it's possible that he and goaltending coach Stephane Waite fix some mechanics before Crawford goes back in net.

"Sometimes you need your goalie coach to look and see," Crawford said. "As a goalie, it's tough sometimes to really know if you're fine, if there's nothing to change or if there's something to change. Sometimes you need that extra set of eyes to figure that out for you."

His teammates tested him out at practice Friday.

"I tried today and he stopped me glove side, so hopefully he's got it all figured out," left-winger Patrick Sharp said. "I don't know if that was the game plan or if that's something they did on purpose and they were successful at it, but I like Corey in there."

So does coach Joel Quenneville, who insisted he was not considering replacing Crawford with backup Ray Emery, who hasn't played in almost two months. Crawford is the man for the Blackhawks.

"In our room he hasn't taken any heat, so I don't know what's being said out there," defenceman Duncan Keith said. "You look at the job he's done all season for us, he's been great all year long. I thought we let in five, and they let in six. I mean, we won the game and we'll move on."

Crawford moved on almost immediately. Rather than dissect how he gave up five goals in Game 4, he was "thrilled" about the victory and defenceman Brent Seabrook's game-winner.

From the Bruins, there were plenty of denials that they solved Crawford.

"I know we're not skating down the ice thinking, 'Oh my God, if we don't go glove-side we're not going to score.' Nothing like that," forward Shawn Thornton said. "I think it's just a bit of coincidence. We're trying to get pucks on net from everywhere and create traffic and wherever that rebound pops out, I'm sure you're trying to put it in."

That the Bruins put the puck in five times could make Crawford think a lot about last game. Instead, he's trying to keep excess worrying to a minimum.

"There's times when you think about a game more than others," he said. "But at this point, I really don't want to be thinking too much about the last game, whether it was good or bad."

The last game wasn't good. But it was good enough to help Chicago tie the series at 2. Of course that did not mean Crawford was immune from criticism.

"I think that the scrutiny of goaltending at any stage of the season is at a different level of any other player, and I guess it's even more out there now that you're in the final," Quenneville said. "But Corey just seems to move forward whatever the challenge is, the next shot, the next game. He's excited about the opportunity. We're excited about what he accomplished. He won a big game for us, and that's where we're at."

Vigneault takes Rangers' helm

The Associated Press

NEW YORK
Alain Vigneault brought a whole lot of experience and success into his interview with New York Rangers general manager Glen Sather.

However, his most appealing attribute might be that he is so different than former coach John Tortorella — on and off the ice.

That was clearly evident Friday when Vigneault was named as the feisty Tortorella's replacement during a news conference at Radio City Music Hall. In the short window of time in which he met with media members, Vigneault smiled and joked more times than anyone could remember his predecessor doing in 4 1/2 seasons with the Rangers.

"We needed a change in style," Sather said.

Just more than four weeks after he was fired by the Vancouver Canucks, Vigneault already has a job.

Vigneault was given a five-year deal, and his first day featured his name on the famous marquee outside of Radio City.

"I was thinking about the opportunity to coach the New York Rangers, one of the Original Six teams," the 52-year-old Vigneault said. "There is not a chance I could pass that up. Honored and privileged I feel."

In 11 seasons as an NHL head coach with Montreal and Vancouver, Vigneault is 422-288-35-61 in 806 games.

FIRE HYDRANT & WATER MAIN FLUSHING

The Environmental Utilities Department will test and flush fire hydrants plus water mains until October 2013. This is an annual maintenance activity that maintains water quality and system infrastructure. Residents may notice some discoloration of water, which is not harmful and will disappear when flushing is complete. Fluctuating pressure may also be noticed. Should discoloration persist beyond three hours, you may wish to flush the water from your home for a few minutes by watering your lawn or running your tap. Please note that the flushing in your home will not correct private plumbing/corrosion problems. Thank you for your understanding.
