HALIFAX
The brother of a man killed during a mass shooting in Nova Scotia three years ago says he’s keen to move on from conversations from a public inquiry released Thursday that are re-traumatising.

“I’ve tried to come to terms with this situation. I’ve tried to move on,” said Scott McLeod. “I’ve just not been able to avoid it.”

McLeod’s brother, 26-year-old Gabriel Wettlaufer, was one of 22 people who were fatally shot during a 13-hour period on April 18, 2020, in Portapique, northern Nova Scotia. The killer, a 51-year-old former police officer, was killed in a self-inflicted shooting a station north of Halifax on the morning of April 19, 2020.

Like his brother did, Scott works in the federal government. He’s happy with the job he has, but he’s also happy to put the shootings behind him.

“I’ve been feeling the pressure of the inquir...